

In response to the hypothetical assertion that the constituency is not concerned with this issue, that is simply not true. Like so many other assets of democracy, we take our privilege to fair media for granted. But that doesn't mean it doesn't impact every Americans life on a daily basis. Where has our "freedom of information" gone?

And even if the constituents aren't making their voice heard, anyone in the public forum should hold the ethics of media fairness very sacred. Shame on any congressperson who even considers making the American media any more biased and profit-driven than it already is.
